Not precisely. The lower limits on package sizes differ between market categories & claimed use sites for certain types of products.

Read the decision carefully and make sure that your labels comport with it. Before you submit your first set of proposed amended labels, it probably would be a good idea to run proposed text regarding use sites by us in a preliminary way to make sure that you are on the right track.

Thanks Bill. So, tractor type stores are considered the same as professional?

Thanks

The 4-lb minimum applies to bait that is not packaged in or with a tamper-resistant bait station and is not sold in "consumer" stores (supermarkets, drug stores, etc.).

Dan,
I'm a bit confused in interpreting the info for first generation anticoagulants. The way we interpret it is that, take the Combo Bait Pellets as an example: the product will not be allowed for sale in retail, but will be allowed in the professional market, agriculture, including farm stores. The farm store quantities will require higher weights.

Am I reading this correctly? Thanks for your assistance,

Thanks,

Richard Poche
